THE HAPSBURGS.

The late emperor of Austria and Hungary has been laid to rest amid the bones of his ancestors. His successor is already firmly seated upon the throne of his uncle and the world goes on. Yet the Christian Science Monitor points out:

"Of the greatness of the House of Hapsburg, from a historical point of view, there is no end. Hapsburgs have been dukes and archdukes of Austria since 1282, kings of Hungary and Bohemia since 1526, and emperors of Austria since 1550. They have also been Roman emperors, kings of Spain, and German kings, and in the reign of the Emperor Charles V, when the house reached the summit of its greatness, the Hapsburg dominions spread themselves over some of the greatest and wealthiest states of Europe.

"The history of the House of Hapsburg is complicated to the last degree, any consideration of it would involve the writing of a very large part of European history. Nevertheless, complicated as it is, perhaps no other royal house presents such marked characteristics, or has preserved through the centuries a general policy so unchanged and unchanging. In the very early days of their history, the Hapsburgs were famous for the way in which they increased their possessions by judicious marriages, and they have been famous for this ever since. It was thus that their first obtained possession of Germany, and it was thus also that they first obtained possession of Hungary. It was through his marriage with Mary, the daughter and heiress of Charles the Bold of Burgundy, in the fifteenth century, that Maximilian I obtained possession of the Netherlands and other rich lands belonging to that famous duke, and in many other directions by the same means, and by other means, they added steadily to their importance.

"The name Hapsburg, which is a variant of the older name Habichtsburg, or Hawk's Castle, was taken from the castle of Hapsburg, built on the banks of the Aar, not far from its junction with the Rhine, by the Bishop of Basle in 1020. The Hapsburgs, however, do not begin to come certainly into history until the close of the thirteenth century. About that time we find one Albert styling himself Count of Hapsburg, and increasing the area of the Hapsburg lands with all the characteristic Hapsburg astuteness. Some seventy years later, a Hapsburg, in the person of Rudolph, was seated on the German throne, and thence onwards they were foremost figures in European history. "Amongst the notable reverses incidental to their history in the middle ages must be mentioned the revolt of the Swiss. The Swiss people had chafed for many long years under the rule of the Hapsburgs, and the open struggle continued for nearly two centuries. Duke Leopold I was defeated at Morgarten in 1315, and Leopold III, at Sempach in 1386, and so it went on, until the signing of the 'perpetual peace' in 1447, ended the rule of the Hapsburgs in Switzerland.

"It was, however, within a comparatively short time of this reverse that the House of Hapsburg reached the height of its power. Charles V, was emperor. He had succeeded to all the hereditary lands of the Hapsburgs, and to the power and prestige which flowed to him as head of the Holy Roman Empire. He added the wealth and commerce of the Netherlands, of Spain, and of the Spanish colonies in America. In Italy, he ruled over Sardinia, Naples, Sicily and the duchy of Milan, whilst to his inherited possessions in the Netherlands he added Groningen, Gelderland and the bishopric of Utrecht. At the same time his brother Ferdinand was ruler over the Austrian Archduchies and Tyrol, Bohemia and her dependent provinces, and a considerable part of Hungary. Thus, the House of Hapsburg had really only one rival in Europe, and that was the House of Valois in France, and it was with the Valois that the Hapsburgs measured swords for nearly two hundred years.

"The next great landmark in the history of the Hapsburgs is, perhaps, afforded by the reign of Maria Theresa in the eighteenth century. The story of how her father, Charles VI, tried to secure her succession; how he issued the famous pragmatic sanction, which declared that the Hapsburg monarchy was indivisible, and that, in default of male heirs, a female could succeed to it; how he spared no ingenuity in securing the assent of all the Powers to the arrangement; how, immediately on his daughter's accession, many of these Powers threw it aside and clamored to possess themselves of Hapsburg lands; and how Maria Theresa finally triumphed, made up one of the great stories of history.

"And so, by way of the treaties of Paris and Vienna after the Napoleonic wars, treaties which were highly favorable to the Hapsburgs, we come to the year 1848 and the accession of Francis Joseph. The rest is the story of yesterday."

SENTENCED FOR LIFE.

Judge Grimm, in passing sentence upon the unfortunate and illiterate Italian who pleaded guilty to the murder of a fellow countryman, laid special emphasis upon the friends of both the dead man and the convicted criminal, that they should think good thoughts and eschew evil associations. In his address to the Elks at their memorial services on Sunday, Father Mahoney also laid special stress upon the same thoughts, and today it is repeated more strikingly, perhaps, by the fact that a man is sentenced to life imprisonment for a murder committed while crazed by evil thoughts. It is a lesson to every young man and woman to control their thoughts, to think only of the good there is in life and not the evil. Unfortunately the press of the country are forced to publish accounts of crimes in their news columns as a lesson to others and at the same time they print columns of news that teaches a different lesson. The poor Italian who goes to Waupun to serve out the remainder of his life for a crime, is a victim of evil thoughts and is to be pitied, although society does not forgive the crime.

INVESTMENTS.

Probably there has never been a time when there was so much financial advertising in the big metropolitan newspapers. The stock market pages of many of them are fairly covered with alluring propositions. Papers that circulate among working people and persons of small means often get an enormous quantity of this advertising, perhaps quite as much as papers that appeal particularly to the wealthier classes.

It looks as though a great many people of very slender resources were being tempted into quite doubtful propositions. Of course many of these propositions are no doubt all right. But a great many of them are only partly developed prospects. No man living can tell whether they will be payers or not.

Formerly people of small means used generally to put money into savings banks. They were fearful of stocks, and distrusted all forms of paper securities, even the notes and bonds of the solidest corporations. Now a lot of these same people are allured by chances to make a fortune. A woman who had made a pile of money in a very hazardous mining operation advised all her friends to go into such schemes. "Where would I be if I hadn't?" she said. "But most of those who took her advice will lose their pathetic little hoards."

Meanwhile there are always a lot of good properties and mortgages and enterprises near one's home town, in which people who are not satisfied with bank interest can invest. They would not make anybody rich right off, but the money would be there when it was wanted. It's a good safe rule that a venture that promises extraordinary profits also involves extraordinary risks. Otherwise it would quickly be snapped up by the insiders before the general public got a chance at it.

HEALTH INSURANCE.

Bills are to be introduced this winter in many of the states for some form of health insurance. It is proposed that the state pay one-fifth of the cost, the employer two-fifths, and the employee two-fifths. Only those receiving incomes of less than $100 a month would be eligible.

Before assenting to the above, the taxpayer would want the habits of candidates for insurance to be looked into. There are a large number of people who would literally and frequently the injunction to "take a little wine for your stomach's sake." Also with variations of the beverage to suit taste and purse. It is of course done out of pure desire to preserve their physical efficiency, yet a prying medical examiner would be skeptical.

It is of course possible that some form of health insurance might be worked out that would not be a burden. Certainly absence of employers because of sickness is a great source of loss to business firms. If they could be sure that their work people would comply with sanitary requirements and submit to regular health inspections, there are a good many employers who would say they could afford the cost of contributing to such an insurance fund.

In Mexico the bandits are very popular, living in the bushes and way-laying the rich for money. Up in this country they are very popular, living in fine houses and queering the poor for the necessities of life.

PRESIDENT DELIVERS ANNUAL MESSAGE

mediation, conciliation and arbitration of such controversies as the president by adding to it a provision that, in case the method of accommodation now provided for should fail, a full public investigation of the merits of every such dispute shall be instituted and completed before a strike or lockout may lawfully be attempted.

"The lodgment in the hands of the executive of the power, in case of military necessity, to take control of such portions of such rolling stock of the railroads of the country as may be required for military use and to operate them for military purposes, with authority to draft into the military service of the United States such train crews and administrative officials as the circumstances may require for their safe and efficient use."

Looks to Public Interest.
The renewed recommendation for compulsory investigation of labor disputes on railways before strikes or lockouts are allowed, which has aroused the opposition of the railroad brotherhoods and of the American Federation of Labor, was defended in the president's message. He declared he would hesitate to recommend a law which would force individual workmen to continue in an employment which they desired to leave, but that no such principle was involved in the suggestion that the operation of the railroads of the country should not be stopped by the concentrated action of bodies of men until a public investigation for the benefit of the public had been instituted.

"It is based upon the very different principle," he continued, "that the concentrated action of powerful bodies of men shall not be permitted to stop the industrial processes of the nation, at any rate before the nation shall have had an opportunity to acquaint itself with the merits of the case between employee and employer, time to form its opinion upon an impartial statement of the merits, and opportunity to consider all practicable means of conciliation or arbitration. I can see nothing in that proposition but the justifiable safeguarding by society of the necessary processes of its very life. There is nothing arbitrary or unjust in it unless it be arbitrarily and unjustly done. It can and should be done with a full and scrupulous regard for the interests and liberties of all concerned as well as for the permanent interests of society itself."

Qualities Somewhat Rare.
Perhaps a gentleman is a rarer man than some of us think for. Which of us can point out many such in his circle; men whose aims are generous, whose truth is not only constant in its kind, but elevated in its degree; whose want of meanness makes them simple, who can look the world manly in the face with an equal manly sympathy for the great and the small. —Thackeray.

Pathos in His Death.
A strange death recently befell a member of the Royal Irish Constabulary. He was cutting a bough off a large tree at his house in Drumad, Armagh, when the bough, weighing over a ton, broke, and, the end pinning him against the trunk, killed him. The first news of the accident was brought by his little child running to her mother saying: "Daddy is asleep up in the tree."

What is perhaps another case for fear of postoffice inspectors was brought out at the station when Mrs. Palermo was confronted with a letter containing threats against Mrs. Josie Angeliello. "On the North Street City" the address read. Not only was Mrs. Angeliello threatened but her family was likewise. Mrs. Palermo, that she had admitted, admitted after a little questioning the letter. AUTO THIEVES RAIDED GARAGE SUNDAY NIGHT

Auto thieves, evidently thoroughly acquainted with the premises, raided the garage of Frank Godfrey on Sunday night, stole a handsome automobile, took the front tires and one rear tire from the car, and made good their escape. Mr. Godfrey lives in the town of Johnstown, between the Milwaukee and the Middle roads, and did not find the missing car until Monday morning. The tires were practically new, and the only reason that the other rear tire was not taken was because it was in such poor condition that it could not be taken off the car easily. No tools or any other articles were taken.

SHOW INTEREST IN DOMESTIC SCIENCE WORK IN SCHOOLS

Teachers and Pupils in District Schools of County Enter into New Course With Enthusiasm.

Courses in domestic science and manual training which are being taught in a large number of the rural schools of Rock county meet with the approval of teachers and pupils according to Superintendent O. D. Arnold. To stimulate the interest and to demonstrate to teachers and parents the value of such instruction, Miss William Williams, teacher in the domestic science at the training school, is devoting one afternoon a week to a lecture at some rural school. Five such meetings have already been held and as many more are scheduled. A member of the county superintendent's office or training school force accompany Miss Williams on her trips which are made on Friday afternoons. The mothers of the children in the district are invited to the meetings and enjoy Miss Williams' lecture on food values and a balanced diet. A nourishing soup is usually prepared and a portion served to each person. The next meeting of this character will be held at the school of Miss Anna Arnold, in District No. 1, town of Center.

In a number of the schools of the county the school boards have provided equipment for the teaching of domestic science and manual training. In other districts the teachers and pupils raise funds through the medium of box socials and entertainments. Money raised in this manner ranges from $12 to $35. In many cases the money is spent for books and school furniture. Several schools have victrolas and money is spent for new records.

The following letter from Miss Anna Arnold, town of Center, which appears in this month's issue of the superintendent's bulletin describes the method employed in teaching domestic science and manual training:

"In our school we take one-half hour every Friday forenoon for domestic science and manual training. The boys work in the front of the room, and I seat the girls in a group near them. Someone is appointed in each group to distribute the tools and necessary materials. Instructions are given to each class. Then they all begin work at once, and I do not find it hard to direct both classes.

"Each boy brought what tools he could. We have two saws, two squares, three hammers and a plane, which seems to be sufficient for while some are measuring, others are sawing, planing, etc. The district provides us with all the necessary articles that cannot be brought from home.

"The boys have made a cabinet for our drinking cups. First we drew a plan, so that each boy had a definite idea of how the cabinet was to look when completed. Sometimes, before school, I write the name of each boy on the blackboard, with the dimensions of the piece of wood to be cut and planed. This saves time in class and also guards against errors. For our next few lessons we shall make picture frames.

"The girls make sewing bags and now we are doing Miss Clapp's suggestions. I find both boys and girls very enthusiastic, and neither class hinders the work of the other. Some ideas were obtained from 'The Library of Work and Play—Carpentry,' which I procured from the Janesville library. The father of one of the boys has also offered a great number of suggestions."

Quiet Joys.

The joys that are bought with money are worth nothing compared with the joys that, though sweet and gentle and unassuming, are yet deep, enduring and quieting; the joys that enlarge the heart instead of diminishing it, and which we too often pass by—some what in the manner of those peasants whom one sees in an ecstasy over the fireworks at some fête, and who pay not the smallest attention to the splendor of a summer night.—Sabater.

A MOMENT WITH THE MUSE

Little Ones. A pretty child I love to see, of all the pleasures that I delight in, it is just to be where I can hear their prattle. I love to watch them at their play whatever they're enjoying and yet at times they're in the way and just a bit annoying. I have a knee or two and there I oftentimes endeavor to bounce a child. I would not care to do the same forever. Moreover children have I seen that scarcely deplete one's whole heart and all I really mean only like the nice ones. They need not be so far to view nor yet so full of rearing through if they're bright and healthy too. They have my hearty cheering. But when they're fresh and smart, oh that's when most they pall and bother; how would I spank such little brats were I their dotting father! To rear a child unspoiled and free of subversive disposition, oh that's—or so it seems to me—a Mother's noblest mission.

Our Own Health and Beauty Hints

DYSPEPSIA—Early morning exercise is often very good for dyspepsia when everything else has failed. Are there children in your neighborhood? Go out every morning and shake a stick at them on their way to school. They will soon devise many amusing little ways to keep you hot in their pursuit. Interest them in beating on your door every morning and you will soon see a great improvement in the flow of your gastric juices.

One on the Naturalist. Theodore Watts, says Charles Rowley in his book, "Fifty Years of Work Without Wages," tells a good story against himself. A nature enthusiast, he was climbing Snowdon and overtook an old grey woman. He began to dilate upon the sublimity of the scenery in somewhat gushing phrases: The woman paid no attention to him. Provoked by her inattention, he said: "You don't seem to care for this magnificent scenery?" She took the pipe from her mouth and delivered this settler: "I enjoys it; I don't jabber."

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

"Some Baby." "Some Baby," which comes to the New Myers Theatre next Thursday night, December 7, is made for laughing purposes only. The stage bids for response from different corners. There are romances that seek out temperamental, tragedies that find a response in the hearts of all is the farcical comedy that cheers and rouses the humor in us. "Some Baby" is a typical play of the latter kind. Never mind its story. Do not get worked up over its plot. Just make yourself with the idea that it's a laugh producer, a destroyer of worries and cares and you will be fully prepared for a jolly mirthful two hours within the glare of the footlights.

The company that will interpret the several parts of this company are said to be of exceptional merit, with Grace Merritt, who reached stellar honors in "The Knighthood of the Flower" and "The Blue Mouse" at the head. Seats are now selling and it would not be wise to miss this—one of the notable offerings of the current season.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

With catchy music and capable soloists to sing with lively dances and expert dancers to interpret them, with numerous comedy situations and clever comedians to take advantage of them, and with foundation of elaborate scenic and consuming embellishments, and the Winter Garden directors to exercise their famed talent and generosity to supply these, "A World of Pleasure" is the new Myers theatre Sunday evening, Dec. 10, can truthfully lay claim to the distinction of being the most complete musical extravaganza in the city. The cast of the company of night at the New York Winter Garden. It is reasonable to suppose that a corps of principals which includes Conroy and Le Maire, William Norris, Collins and Hart, the Courtney Sisters, Rosie Quinn, Margaret Edwards, McMahon, Diamond and Chaplow, Franklin Batie, Wanda Lyon, and Marie Healy, as well as a number of others of scarce lesser fame, would give zest and speed to any performance in which they might take part. And the large ensemble which supports these principals gives further verve to the performance. It is a veritable beauty show, the directors of the Winter Garden having sent to the choice selection of the many girls who have participated in the success of their recent productions.

Scenically "A World of Pleasure" is said to lead any other Winter Garden show of recent years. There are nine huge scenes unfolded in its two acts, which run the gamut from an up-to-date metropolitan society to a huge congress of the soldiers of all nations. There are scenes from the famous Riverside Drive of New York City; a roof garden where Manhattan frolics, Japanese tea rooms, toy shops and ornate ball rooms. The audience is given an insight to many of the gayest and latest reveals that occur in these metropolitan scenes of recreation, and the costumes are in splendid keeping with the beauty of the girls and the stage settings. It is called upon to adorn with a veritable fashion parade with all the latest crests of feminine attire, tantalizingly exhibited on the forms of beautiful and shapely young women.

True Belief. To hope and not to be impatient is really to believe.—Meredith. These Boys. "You've been fighting that Brown boy again," said his ma. "To small a sight," said the boy. In reply to the same Sammy said, to wit: "Now! Not again, it's the same old fight!"

ELECTRICITY IN ALL ITS MYSTERY

Louis Miller to Show Wonders of the Modern Aladdin's Lamp.

Aladdin's lamp sinks into mere insignificance when compared to the modern spirit slave of mankind. Louis Williams, the noted electrical entertainer, will demonstrate by means of an elaborate and expensive equipment, some of the many wonders of electricity at the Methodist church on Wednesday evening.

This is the second of the numbers of the "People's Popular Lecture Course" which will be given at the Gargill M. E. church this season. The first number was a surprise and a treat to all who heard it.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two chums of seventeen.

(1) There are two boys whom we like very much and have been with a few times, as they live in a nearby town. There is going to be a Christmas dance in our town and I would like to know if it will be proper to ask them?

(2) If we should ask them to come what would be the proper thing to say in writing to them?

(3) What would be a nice Christmas gift to a fellow on the border whom I am corresponding with and like very much? Do you think it is proper for a girl and boy to exchange pictures? I can't see any harm in it.

(4) How nice should girls of our age sit up with company?

(5) Do you think it is proper for mothers to sit up with their daughters when they are entertaining callers?

(6) A certain boy has my ring. Should I ask him for it or wait until he gives it to me?

(7) How should you think a girl should be before starting a hope box?

(8) Since the boys have taken you places, it will be all right to invite them to go to your dance, will it?

(9) Make your letter informal and tell them the time and the place of the dance.

(10) Make him a box of candy or some cookies and mail it to him.

(11) A girl cheapens herself by giving away her pictures promiscuously. As soon as a friendship with a boy is ended the girl wishes a thousand times she had back her picture.

(12) Not later than ten o'clock.

(13) It is decidedly proper—expect-ally when their daughters are only seventeen. I believe, however, that girls should be trusted if they are worthy of trust and given a little thing along with their callers.

(7) Ask him for it. He will probably never think to give it to you.

(8) I believe that girls should begin to embroider, crochet, etc., as soon as they are old enough to write. But I think they should use the things they make at once and not put them away in hopes that some day they will marry.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: For the past two years I have been having pimples and blackheads and I have tried a number of remedies which have done no good. Gradually my face is becoming worse. I have lumps under my skin and when I squeeze them a kind of worm comes out. No matter if I open them every day there is always the little worm. Some are so painful that I can't open them. I have quite a number of them and they are disagreeable to look at. I would thank you to print something that would cure them no matter how much it costs.

A skin trouble as bad as yours needs the special attention of a doctor. I will print a blackhead and pimple remedy for you to try, however.

To cure blackheads make an ointment of one part of soap liniment, and one ounce of ether. At night scrub the face thoroughly with hot water, using a complexion or other soft brush. After wiping, apply the mixture to each of the spots and let it remain on over night. Wash off in the morning with a wet washcloth. Continue until the spots have disappeared. Then wash the face with this mixture, removing the liquid at once by rinsing with clear water. If there are large pores, wipe over each with a little alcohol.

For pimples that frequently appear with blackheads make an ointment of two grains of beta naphthol and twenty grains of sulphur precipitate and twenty grains of potash soap. Rub over the pimples at night. This may be used at the same time as the blackhead mixture.

Household Hints

FOR HOLIDAY SUPPER.
Caviar—Mix one chopped onion, some lemon juice and salad dressing. Serve on hot toast.

Crab Meat.
Mix finely chopped crab meat or lobster with yolks of hard-boiled eggs that have been pressed through a sieve. Add mayonnaise or thick cream. Spread on rounds of toast. Garnish with rings cut from whites of the hard-boiled eggs.

Sardine Canape.—Remove bones from sardines, rub to a smooth paste, add few drops lemon juice and some paprika. Spread on toast. Garnish with chopped hard-boiled eggs.

POTATO BREAD.
Pare and slice five small or three medium-sized potatoes and boil in one and one-half pints of water. Cook them slowly until they are soft enough to put through the ricer. If you have not as much as that, make up with enough cold water to fill the three cups.

Next, measure another pint of cold water, in which soak two cakes of compressed yeast.

To the potato water add two tablespoons of melted lard, half a cup sugar and small handful of salt. Lastly, add flour enough for a thick batter. Beat hard with a wooden spoon until light and bubbly.

Then measure the water in which the yeast has been thoroughly dissolved. Add a little more flour and beat again for a few minutes, and add flour gradually until the dough is as long as you can, then knead it with the hands long and well, being careful not to get it too stiff. If by some false calculation you should get it too stiff, soften with a little cold water.

When you have finished kneading it, rub a little lard or butter over bottom and sides of bread to prevent sticking and to do away with the necessity of using more flour for kneading for the final rising.

Set bread to rise and let it gain twice or even three times the original size before kneading down again. Set for a second rising and when it is light again make into loaves and put into the pans in which bread is to be baked.

This makes five large loaves. If fewer are desired use less water and yeast in proportion to the number needed.

The whole process should not take over six hours from start to finish. If the dough is covered for night, it should be kept warm but never hot. Better too cool than too hot. Never use tough or rubbery looking yeast; it should be crumbly when broken, but not hard crumbs.

THE TABLE.
Cardinal Jelly.—Use a round mold for this jelly. One package of gelatin softened in cold water, sufficient to cover; then dissolve in one pint of boiling water. Add one cup granulated sugar and stir until dissolved. Add juice of one lemon and one cup orange juice (use good oranges or a deep red with vegetable coloring). Turn a little into the chilled mold, let harden, then fashion a wreath of almonds and maraschino cherries, using almonds for leaves and cherries for berries. Turn in remainder of jelly and fashion another wreath on top.

Prune Cookies (good and cheap).
Three-fourths cup granulated sugar, one-third cup shortening (half butter, half lard), one egg, one cup prunes (soak over night and put through grinder), one-half teaspoon ground cinnamon, one-half teaspoon grated nutmeg, one-fourth teaspoon ground cloves, one teaspoon baking soda dissolved in quarter cup hot water, about two cups flour. Mix in order named. Soft or hard-bake about six minutes—moderate oven for "soft," little longer for "hard." Makes about sixty cookies twice the size of silver dollar.

The Highflyers

"Oh, Aunt Molly, how are you?" asked Marjory, bursting into the sick room and causing the mother to open her eyes with a start.

"I was so distressed when I heard you were sick. We were just starting for New York. I did not have time to say anything."

"There, dear, Tom wired me. He should not have done it. Of course, if I had known you were going away, I should not have sent for you. You could not find anyone to stay with me that night and—somebody felt afraid to stay alone. I had so much pain in my chest."

"You are better now?" interrupted the girl.

"Oh, yes. The night letter came early in the morning and then of course I understood why you had not come."

"Were you alone all night?" asked the niece, her conscience annoyingly active.

"Yes," she answered simply.

"It must have seemed very long," remarked the girl.

"I lived through it. We will not talk about it. Tell me about your trip. She turned a bright face toward her niece as if she were expecting to hear a fair story.

"Oh, Aunt, did you know why we went to New York so suddenly?" asked Marjory in an eager undertone. The head on the pillow indicated a gentle negative.

"We went to see the lawyer about a FORTUNE that Tom is to have. She exploded her news like a bomb and the pale face flushed with excitement. Some relative of Tom's mother has died and left them all the money."

"So you went after it?" asked the sick woman.

"Well, no, just to see about it. It will be settled in a few days. The money is all in the hands of the lawyer. It is horrid that neutral people have to be bothered this way."

"So my little girl is going to have money at last?"

"When I get it you shall not work another day," announced Marjory with rare generosity.

A pained light shone in the tired eyes. "You will have no more than you need. I cannot imagine your having all you would want. I can do for myself very well."

"Well, see about that," Marjory tossed the matter lightly aside.

"Does the young reporter room here yet? The one who worked on the Clarion?"

"I think so."

"Well, I would like to see him. You know this thing is bound to be in the paper and I want to have it go in right. Such things are so exaggerated. There was no answer."

"Could you send for him and tell him the bare facts and if he seems interested send him to me for particulars?"

"Send for him to come here?"

"There was surprise in her voice."

"Why not?"

"In my sick room? Surely you can wait till the thing—"

"I should think you could see that that was just what I was trying to avoid. I do not want a garbled account of the thing printed."

"Perhaps they will not get hold of it at all," comforted the sick woman.

"Of course they will. They always do," snapped Marjory. "Here I will write a note and you can have it delivered after I am gone."

"I have no one to send. Couldn't you sign your name and slide it under his door?"

"Marjory's face was under his door in the extreme, as she sat down at the desk and wrote and tore notes till she achieved one to her liking. (To be continued.)

HOW STANDARDS RISE.

"Terrible, isn't it," said my neighbor, with a sigh, "the way our standards rise?"

"Explain," I demanded. "I thought it was desirable for peoples' standards of cleanliness and education and so forth to rise."

"I wasn't thinking of cleanliness or education," she said, "I was thinking of clothes."

"You mean—"

She thought five dollars enough for a hat.

"That seven or eight years ago I thought five dollars was plenty to pay for a hat. Then one year I bought a hat for seven-fifty. After that five seemed small, and when I got a hat for five I felt I was economizing, and wondered if it was really good hat. Then two years ago I saw a hat I simply had to have, for ten dollars. I felt terribly extravagant, but after all it was only two dollars and a half more than seven-fifty and so I bought it."

"And now?" I prompted.

"Well," she confessed, "I promised myself that I'd make that my outside limit, and then this year—well, yesterday, I went in to S—'s and I saw the most becoming hat—"

"How did you know?" she looked at me appealingly.

"I know how she felt."

"Go on," I said, "I know just how you felt. Was it fifteen dollars?"

"How did you know?" Well, anyhow, I didn't mean to buy it, but it was this way. The saleswoman could see I was in love with it and when I said, "Oh, no, my dear, it's one of the cheapest, hats we have—only fifteen dollars."

"And if you bought it?"

She nodded. "Wasn't I foolish? But it is a dear, and I'm going to make it do three seasons."

"How long do you think it will be before fifteen seems an ordinary price for a hat to you?"

"Never!" she said, fervently.

I wonder.

It is so deadly easy for that kind of standard to rise.

And sometimes too much economy is unwise.

And sometimes it really is economy to pay two or three dollars more and get a hat that will last two seasons, or a gown that will serve two functions. I am already regretting a gown that I didn't pay quite enough for.

And if one is with people who have more money than oneself and think and talk in larger figures, how hard it is to help catching the contagion of their standards!

All honor, I say, to the woman who can resist such temptations, and yet not go to the other extreme of buying the cheap and unsatisfactory thing that will only have to be bought over again.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

DIET IN ACHILIS' SECOND YEAR

The diet of a child in the second year should consist principally of milk, pure, clean, unmodified cow's milk. Certainly any artificial substitutes should be discontinued by this time, whether the baby likes the change or not. In addition to the milk a certain amount of other food is necessary.

Here is a good sample diet for a child in the second year. It was a little girl named Achilis, who was 8 o'clock, orange juice or the juice of any ripe fruit.

10 o'clock, Breakfast, consisting of a well cooked cereal, such as barley, oatmeal, wheat or farina, with a pinch of salt, a little sugar and cream. Some buttered toast. A soft boiled egg. A cup of milk.

1 o'clock, Dinner, consisting of chicken, mutton, or beef-steak, with a little green vegetable and some boiled or mashed potato. Some scraped meat may be given the second half of the year. Stale bread and butter. For dessert, baked apple, apple sauce, junket or tapioca.

6 o'clock, Supper, cereal and cream, home-cooked, of course. (Read to eat cereals are less desirable for bread and butter. Some stewed fruit. Cup of milk.

10 o'clock, a good night cup of milk.

Between meals only water should be allowed.

For dessert, a little pure stick or home-made candy may be substituted two or three days a week. But candy must not be fed between meals.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

What is the cause of eye-irritis? Is it contagious or infectious?

ANSWER.—Iritis means inflammation of the iris, the part that gives color to the eye, and by contracting color or dilating alters the size of the pupil in different lights. Inflammation may be septic (focal infection from tonsil, for instance), syphilitic, direct infection (from injury). It is not contagious, but a very serious condition, likely to leave permanent ill effects if not carefully treated.

Your advice about my little girl has helped her so much that I now seek further aid. The doctor assures me her glasses do not need changing, yet she blinks almost continually, so that people remark about it. She has a little nasal trouble for which she is using a spray. She had adenoids removed some time ago. Is there any way to stop the blinking?

ANSWER.—Probably a tic, a habit spasm of the orbicular palpebrarum as a school boy would say. The nasal trouble is likely cause. That must be treated, not by self-spraying, but by the doctor. Also the little girl's clothing, diet, the ventilation of her room and the school room must be looked into. A course of exercises for facial muscles, supervised personally by a good physical director, such as in the Y. M. C. A., would soon overcome the blinking.

We are just investigating the Point. Could you advise me what is a good preventive of baldness, and what is the general cause of the affliction?

ANSWER.—I am just making an exhaustive research on this subject and in five or ten years I shall know whether or not my theory is correct. The theory is that lack of use determines denudation of the hair. Hair renders hair superfluous, so that the hair just quits growing. Have you the nerve to leave off your hat? Never met a man who had yet. Massage of the scalp, self-administered, is a preventive. Cleanliness is important, too. Shampoo often enough, even daily, to keep the scalp clear of dandruff. Brush vigorously.

Answers—Easy. Chronic simple sinusitis. Four cups of coffee too many; usitis. Cigarettes too many, and an occasional drink of wine too much. Stop wearing cotton underwear. Have nose examined by nose and throat doctor.

If a blood analysis shows 11 milligrams of uric acid per 100 cc. would you say that this is held back by defective kidneys?

ANSWER.—The kidneys have little or nothing to do with the retention of uric acid compounds in the blood. This diet and the metabolism would be more fruitful factors to investigate.

GREEKS MUST DEPOSIT MONEY FOR CHILDREN WHEN LEAVING FOR U. S.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Athens, Dec. 5.—Cling to the great increase in the emigration of minors to the United States, who have not reached the age to perform their military service, the Greek government has increased the amount of deposit to be made with the government by the parents or guardians of any minor male child who leaves Greece. A child born in 1898 must deposit, or his parents must deposit for him $120; one born in 1899, $100; in 1900, $80; 1901, $70; and 1902, $60. Without this deposit, being made it is impossible for any male Greek of the age indicated to secure a ticket on a foreign bound vessel.

Tells Time by Running Nose
Carpenter, 36, father of boys, all of us robust, uses 5 or 6 cups coffee a day, and occasionally takes some wine at supper time. Can tell time by nose. Begins running at 9, worse and worse till just noon, passes peak at that time. Discharge seems to be clear mucus, no odor, no obstruction. Nose, smell sense acute, have had it six or seven years. Hoping for a solution. (M. J. W.)

Stevens' Point Girl, 15, MISSING TWO WEEKS GIVES POLICE MYSTERY.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Stevens' Point, Wis., Dec. 5.—Search is being conducted today for Anna Pollock, 15, who was last seen nearly two weeks ago, when she packed her belongings, summoned her pet dog to her side, and left for the home of her uncle, who lives on the south side here. Later it developed that Anna never arrived at the home of her uncle and it is believed she went to Chicago. Anna's home is in Eau Claire. She came here to work several months ago.

Mrs. Samuel Goldberg, for whom she worked, is unable to explain the girl's disappearance. The dog also has not been seen.

GINGLES' JINGLES

THE WEATHER.
As we beat it from the winter through the spring to summer's sun, as we brush the gentle breezes from the courses as we run, we experience discomfort, clinging around the electric fan, and we plainly show we're out of sorts, don't like the weather man. For the cold of winter puts us on the hummer, puts us wrong, and for springtime with its freshets and its floods we're never strong; and the fall is sometimes chilly and is sometimes mighty hot, so as seasons come and go and come again we like them not. There's no weather that can satisfy, no season that is right, for we pull the shades and shutters, closing out the rays of light; sitting in our dungeon quarters, with no entrance to our room, in our studio of horrors, in our wretched hut of gloom. With the mildew in our whiskers and the buzzards on our trail, we're a woeeful lot of rummies with our troubles by the bale; and we'll have them, they'll be with us till we open up the door, till as sisters and as brothers should, we hike for Lemm's Jingles yonder shore.

"Gels-It" Never Fails for Colds!

There's Nothing on Earth Like It For Colds and Coughs.

It's the only medicine that cures colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, and all other respiratory troubles. It's the only medicine that cures colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, and all other respiratory troubles.

The cold is a very common ailment, and one that is often neglected. It is the only medicine that cures colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, and all other respiratory troubles. It's the only medicine that cures colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, and all other respiratory troubles.

Send for a bottle of "Gels-It" and you will find it the only medicine that cures colds, coughs, croup, whooping cough, and all other respiratory troubles.

Colds follow exposure

We can't stay in doors in bad weather, and colds often follow exposure. When you have gripe symptoms with sneezes, sniffles and sore throat, get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, for here is a remedy that for nearly fifty years has been the favorite. The soothing healing pine balsams relieve the irritations and stop the cough and the anti-septic qualities kill the germ. Have it handy for gripe, croup and all winter colds. Your druggist has sold it for years.

Prepare This for a Bad Cough—It's Fine

Cheeply and Easily Made, but Does the Work Quickly.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it. Any druggist can supply you with six ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 50 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effective, pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs, loosens the mucus, soothes the inflamed and swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and grating cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma. Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with glycerol and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

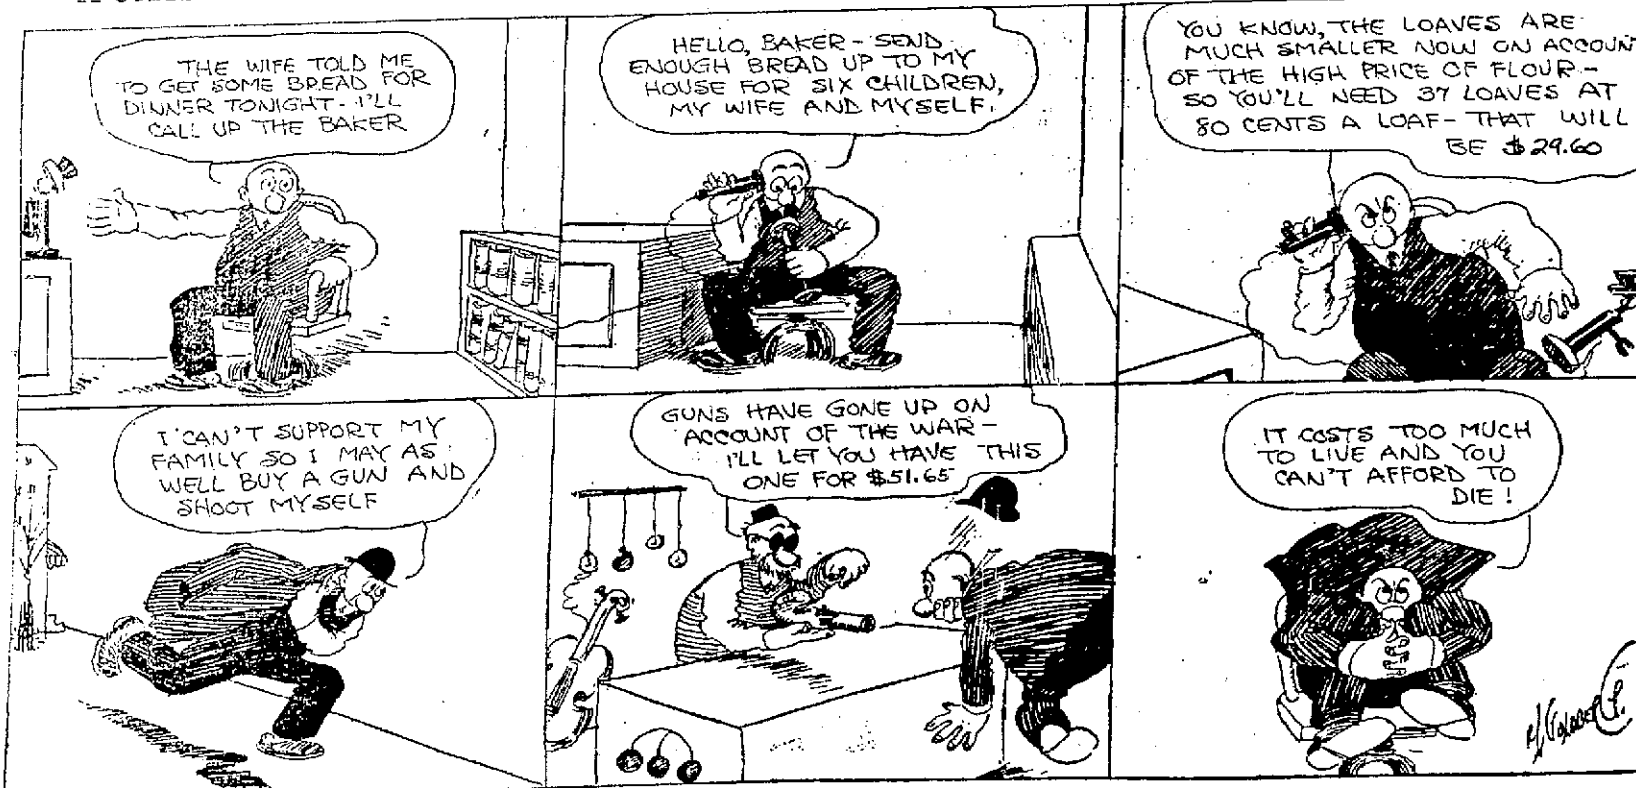

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., St. Wayne, Ind.

FAT FOLKS WHO WOULD BE THIN

Reduce Weight 10 Pounds or More. "I'd certainly give most anything to be able to reduce a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively fat man or woman. Such a result is not impossible despite past failures. Most fat people are the victims of superinduration, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being consumed by the blood. Instead of only nourishing the blood, much of the fat-producing elements are deposited in different parts of the body where they don't belong. To correct this condition and to produce a healthy normal distribution of the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the fat-burning power which nature has denied them. This can probably be best accomplished by taking an Oil of Kerein capsule with every meal. Kerein is a careful combination of splendid fat-reducing elements, and its rapid effect has been reported in many cases. Reported reductions of from 10 to 25 pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet this action is perfectly natural and harmless. Oil of Kerein is sold by Smith Drug Co., and other good druggists in the original sealed laboratory packages. Advertisement.

IT COSTS TOO MUCH TO LIVE AND YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO DIE.

The QUARTERBREED

By ROBERT AMES BENNET

(Copyright by Brown & Howell Co.)

The sun had set, and the twilight was already fading. By the time Marie's slow step brought her up to the terrace, the valley and mountain slopes were dusky with the shadow of approaching nightfall. Within the cabin Dupont had lit one of the nine candles. The candlestick was an empty whisky bottle. Another bottle, not yet empty, stood on the rough deal table between the two men.

"Hello, girl!" sang out Vandervyn, as Marie paused in the open doorway. He sprang up to come around the table to her. "I've been languishing for you all afternoon. Would've chased down the hill, only your dad said you'd get on your car if I did."

"Yes," quietly replied the girl. She had raised her hand to shield her face from the candle, as if the light dazzled her. As she spoke, she stepped in and along the side of the table opposite him, apparently not seeing him.

"Yes, I would not have cared to see you. I was nursing one of the girls down in the camp."

Vandervyn stopped short. "It wasn't anything infectious, I hope."

"No. I shall not suffer from the same trouble. But I am very tired. I see you and Pere have eaten. You might finish the bottle outside."

"How about a kiss to sweeten the toddy?" he suggested.

She burst into a tantalizing little laugh. "I fear you must take your straight for a while, Reggie. You are still engaged to your cousin, I believe—Good night, Pere."

Dupont, heavy with food and liquor, mumbled a response, and stumbled out into the dusk, reluctantly followed by Vandervyn. Marie flung their blankets out after them and barred the door.

In the morning Vandervyn was relieved to find that the night's rest had lightened her mood. She cooked a delicious little breakfast, and was pleased to be very gracious to him. The anxiety with which he had met her at the cabin door soon vanished. He fell into the galleon of an accepted suitor who is very much in love and a bit uncertain of his conquest.

Vandervyn winced as if cut across the face with a whiplash. "No—not her!" he stammered. "That—it would be impossible! She would be—I tell you, I will not stand for it—I cannot!"

"Of course that could not be permitted," sweetly agreed Marie. "I would not care to come back and find I had acquired a stepmother as young or younger than myself—no, not even if she were as clean and as good a girl as is Olana Redbear."

"Then—you think—" hesitated Vandervyn.

"Listen, I have thought and thought, and now I have it all planned out. I must do what is just by you, yet, as you see, I cannot leave Pere here. You may remember that I told you a little about the English people I knew in Ottawa. When I saw that you thought I was romancing, I said no more except in hints. I really was more intimate with Lady Verlane than you will find it easy to believe. Her son and daughters were already married. She took a fancy to me. When I was to come home, she invited me to visit her in England. I had told her all about myself and Pere. We corresponded regularly. She has renewed her invitation more than once. The last time she insisted that I should come without further delay, and bring Pere with me."

"She did?" exclaimed Vandervyn. "Then why not all three of us go together?"

Marie drooped again in her attitude of meek humility.

"You are so generous, Reggie, to be willing to travel with Pere! But I cannot allow you to make such a sacrifice. No; there is a better way. I shall go alone with Pere to England, and then perhaps for a little visit to Paris with the sister of the mother superior of my convent. Pere has never forgotten his French-Canadian dialect, and I have been tinkering it into fairly good French. A month or two in Paris may correct his accent. It may also smooth down our roughness enough for us to venture over to Washington without putting you too greatly to shame before your friends."

"Two months!—all that time?" complained Vandervyn.

"Indeed, no. It will be much longer," answered the girl. "I cannot permit you to marry a mere agency girl. Besides, if Pere does not wish to sell out his cattle business, I may have to wait for returns from the mine. It takes quantities of money to buy polish, and lots of time to put it on. We shall not reach Washington before November or December."

"Five or six months!"

"Yes. Aren't you willing to wait for me?" asked the girl, bridling.

The sudden change from meekness won a hasty assurance from Vandervyn. "Of course I am. It will be a fearful long time to be without you, if you insist upon—But I could run over and see you in England or France."

"No," she refused. "I wish you to stay and work for the good of my people. Pere and I still are members of the tribe, you know, and I am deeply interested in the irrigation project laid out by Captain Hardy."

him before they had the pleasure and privilege of meeting Miss Dupont, he was said to be quite "impossible." But after meeting her, they usually agreed with the general verdict that he was decidedly amusing and "picturesque."

Letters to the wives of three or four ambassadors opened to the heiress the doors of the most exclusive official society, and her wonderful beauty and charm carried all before her by storm. Men raved over her eyes; women over her French gowns. She soon had a suite of devoted admirers and suitors, among whom, despite his engagement to the daughter of his eminent uncle, Mr. Reginald Vandervyn was one of the most ardent.

All this had come to Hardy through society reports in the newspapers and from the chance remarks of acquaintances. The remarks very seldom were made by persons fortunate enough to have attended functions graced by the presence of Miss Dupont. Hardy's neatly kept clothes were somewhat out of style, and his lodgings, in an old warren down on M street, were cheap and shabby.

There were still better reasons for the worldly wise to shun the company of the officer so lately distinguished for his services in the Philippines. It was whispered that the interests for which he had been diligently lobbying since midsummer were opposed to the interests of the pro-administration group of which the eminent Senator Clemmer was the leader. More openly the fact was bruited about that he was to be subjected to trial by court-martial on grave charges.

For he was still in the service. Upon his return from the hard-won race for the mine, he had fled his claim with the commissioners, and journeyed on as soon as possible to the railroad. There he had sold his mare at a low price, but with the option of buying her back within a year. He had then started east, too intent upon his purpose to delay even for a telegram from Vancouver barracks, and never doubting that his commanding officer had granted him the customary leave of absence pending the acceptance of his unconditional and immediate resignation.

Great had been his consternation when, the day of his arrival in Washington, he had reported himself at the war department. Not only had leave of absence been denied him and all action on his resignation been suspended; he had been posted for desertion. However, his record on the one hand, and the indecent haste of the attack on the other, had brought about sufficient intervention by members of the general staff to cause several months' delay in the plan of his enemies to crush him. Action on the charges filed against him by the Indian commissioners and by his commanding officer had been postponed from month to month. Meantime he had been placed under the nominal arrest of confinement to the limits of the District of Columbia, which left him free to pursue the ends for which he had come east. To his surprise, no contest had been filed against his mineral claim. On the contrary, he had soon found himself legally entitled to assign the mine to Marie. His carefully drawn and duly witnessed conveyance had started west in the next mail. Marie's note of acknowledgment stated the esteem and gratitude of the writer in the most correct and conventional of terms.

His progress toward the accomplishment of his second purpose had been far less smooth. In fact, after months of persistent endeavor, he could not be sure that he had made any progress whatever. He had not been barred from an inspection of the new treaty with the tribe, and among them he had found Vandervyn's alleged contract. It purported to appoint the young man attorney and tribal representative and to fix his compensation at twenty per cent of any moneys appropriated to the tribe in payment for the ceded mineral lands.

Dinner Stories

She had been sitting in the furniture shop for nearly two hours inspecting the stock of linoleums. Roll after roll the perspiring clerk brought out, but still she seemed dissatisfied. From her dress he

Judged her to be a person of wealth and thought it likely she would have a good order to give. When at last he had shown her the last roll he paused in despair. "I'm sorry, madam," he said, "I could get some more pieces from the factory. Perhaps you would call in again."

The prospective customer gathered her belongings together and rose from the chair. "Yes, do," she said with a gracious smile, "and ask them to send you one or two with very small designs, suitable for putting in the bottom of a canary cage."

It is claimed that President Wilson laughed for five minutes at a story he heard last election night. Personally he believed that if the president even smiled on that alarming night he is nothing short of a curio, all things considered. Howbeit, here is the story: Senator Ham Lewis, he of the pink hirsute adornment and Chesterfieldian manners, asked: "If you had Bert Williams, Charlie Chaplin and Billy Sunday together, what would you have?" The answer was, "A chocolate nut sundae."

A physician leaving the sick bed of a wife, whose husband accompanied him, exclaimed doubtfully: "I do not like her looks. I have not liked her looks for a long time," was the quick rejoinder of the husband.

Reserve Bank District Report Claims No Recession In Business

There is no recession in the general volume of business at the present time. Production and distribution in most lines anticipate an active season during the ensuing months. Bank deposits and bank clearances are high. Money rates low. Savings deposits have increased owing to the active employment of labor at substantial wages, and among banks handling a large amount of business, particularly those located in larger cities, difficulty is experienced in keeping their funds liquid and at the same time earning a living rate of interest. The banks seem able to care for themselves and the gradual marketing of crops and livestock is tending to make the situation still more comfortable. The high cost of certain raw materials, and the deficient labor supply are constantly before the merchant and manufacturer, but there is evidence that the cash situation may be alleviated through the action recently taken in Detroit to accelerate the handling of incoming shipments; also the anticipated falling in the lumber business is expected to release cash to other industries. The increasing cost of foodstuffs and other necessities, a factor fully employed and apparently able and willing to buy in a substantial way. Retailers are anxious to carry large stocks, causing a falling in the prices in some directions. In spite of the high prices a good fall trade seems to be in prospect. Confidence in the currency is high. The present property seems to be gaining in some quarters, but the more conservative are watching the evidence of change and are handling their affairs accordingly. Banks report outside of the reserve cities a better demand for funds, and in most of the agricultural communities the financial condition appears to be sound.

The past year has proven itself a satisfactory one to the majority of those engaged in agriculture in this district and those in the wheat section are preparing for a larger acreage than last year. We are advised that Illinois and Indiana have increased their wheat acreage, as well as Iowa to a moderate extent. Michigan and Wisconsin do not produce much of this staple to affect national conditions, but a material extent of the present conditions have been satisfactory to the growth of the plant although there was some loss of plants due to the dryness of the soil.

Agricultural Implements. Conditions in this line have changed but little since the last report, and manufacturers seem determined to build a moderate production for next year. Selling prices may have to be readjusted owing to the costs of material and labor. It is thought that this may restrict sales.

Automobiles. This is naturally a slow time of the year for manufacturers in this line, but retailing volume indicates a satisfactory volume. The demand is keeping factories busy and these outputs are planned for next year. Fear of overproduction seems to be in the thoughts of some of the manufacturers.

Building and Building Materials. Building is active in some localities but has been retarded by delays in shipment of material. High structural cost has postponed some operations in this line. Cement is entering its usual season with a reasonably good building record.

Coal. The coal situation has received considerable publicity of late, but the manufacturers assert that the shortage is exaggerated by an increased demand for coal and the lack of railroad equipment for handling shipments from the mines. The business itself shows a prosperous condition and it is expected that the 1917 crop will be the most extensive that has ever been made. Withdrawals from bonded warehouses are reported ahead of last year. Many companies are operating to capacity.

Dry Goods. Orders for spring delivery have been taken by wholesale dealers in various quantities, and we understand that manufacturers have recently quoted cotton blankets and napped cotton cloth for the fall of 1917 at from 20 to 25 per cent higher than in 1916. There is a shortage in certain lines, notably hosiery and underwear. Collections are generally satisfactory, but it is felt in some quarters that the merchants are buying too heavily on credit, making payments. Also the increased cost of merchandise requires more capital to finance the same stock.

Furniture. Business in this line is good with collections satisfactory, but the advances in raw material have forced up prices to a level which makes the manufacturer apprehensive as to the future volume of business.

Grain Market. The distributing movement of grain has been retarded by the car situation. Prices are higher than last month, caused by the heavy foreign demand and the short supply.

Grain. Wholesale report shows sales and profits, but they seem to be experiencing considerable difficulty in securing supplies, particularly in the line of canned goods and some fancy groceries. The principal danger in the situation appears to be for the retailer who is forced to buy fixed-price package goods and is also compelled to finance the purchase of his usual stock of merchandise at the prevailing prices. Collections are satisfactory.

Hardware. Great activity is evidenced in this line, at advancing prices, and there seems to be no complaint with regard to collections. A business is anticipated for some months to come, and some factories in this district are running both night and day.

Leather. The leather trade continues unusually active with further advances in price. Stocks of finished leather are low, and shoe manufacturers appear to have more business before them. Leather belting is fairly active, and collections throughout the industry are reported as satisfactory.

Cattle. Cattle during the past month sold at substantial prices. It is thought that the high price of corn will force into the market some cattle which the farmers originally intended to feed through the winter.

Lumber. This line of industry is only fairly active, but wholesalers and retailers in some of the larger cities are anticipating a good volume due to the development of new building operations in their territory. On the whole, however, conditions are onesided.

Mail Order. Concerns in this line report business in District Seven as considerable in extent. Little change is in evidence in this industry. Orders are above normal, collections good, and raw materials scarce at higher prices. Labor is difficult to secure and there has been some trouble with labor but the difficulty is local and it is not expected to spread.

Shoebuilding. Companies in this line are actively engaged with their capacity taken for some time to come. Manufacturers appear satisfied with the outlook and there is no change to report.

Staple. Mills are operating at capacity and are booked well ahead. Orders are taken at attractive prices, and no decrease in activity is looked for in this line for several months at least.

Watches and Jewelry. With the approach of the holiday season more interest is shown in these lines, and certain authorities look for a record year. Collections are good, with excellent prospects for the next few months.

Wool and Woollens. Prices of raw wool are well maintained, and manufacturers are operating with large forces. Collections are good, and the present condition is expected to continue until the end of the war abroad, when authorities in this line agree that a protective tariff will be necessary. It is expected that the present high prices may to some degree curtail sales.

Cleanings in Chicago. For the first sixteen business days of December, the city of Chicago reported a total of $1,306,000,000 in business, more than the corresponding sixteen business days in November, 1915. Clearings reported by nineteen cities in the district outside of Chicago amounted to $266,000,000 for the first fifteen days of November, 1916, as compared with $199,000,000 for the first fifteen days of November, 1915. Deposits in the city of Chicago for the first fifteen days of November, 1916, were $707,000,000 at the close of business November 15, 1916 and loans were $484,000,000. Deposits for the first fifteen days of November, 1915, were $648,000,000 and loans were $400,000,000. There was an increase of approximately $8,000,000 over last month.

U. S. AID IS NEEDED TO SETTLE FARM LAND

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 5.—Americans have grown out of the pioneering habit which ever lured the forefathers of the country to establish further boundaries. E. Dore Durand of the University of Minnesota told delegates to the Conference on Marketing and Farm Credits. He was discussing in particular the land settlement problems of northern Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota.

The northern parts of these states, he said, contain millions of acres of fertile land which is well watered, but because of the difficulties of clearing they remain untenanted.

Whereas in Iowa four-fifths of the land is under cultivation, Durand said that the proportion in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan is but two-fifths. The greatest difficulties of the land settlement problem in these sections, he said, are forests, stones and swamps.

"The attractions of the cities not only draw young men away from the developed farm regions but still more tend to keep them from going into new regions where the development of farms is a laborious and slow process," the speaker asserted. He expressed the opinion that federal and state governments should aid in settling such lands.

Bankers' On Ownership. A banker's idea of the proper limitations of government ownership was given by Robert D. Kent, president of the Merchants' bank of Passaic, N. J. Mr. Kent, at the sub-conference devoted to land settlement, said epigrammatically:

"I would sum up my thoughts regarding government ownership regulation and supervision by saying we should have of them as little as possible, but as much as necessary."

The individual speaker, who will reap the special benefit of success should bear the burden and take the risk involved," the speaker said. "If he has sufficient capital to invest so that the organization which furnishes him the balance needed is made secure, all is well. If, however, his capital falls short of this, as it often will, my contention is that the organization which furnishes him the balance needed should come from those most nearly associated with him—his neighbors and friends, who know him best and can watch and check up his progress. They, next to himself, will be the beneficiaries of his success, therefore they should be the burden of giving him the needed help."

If this is not possible, the town or township in which he is located should furnish the help. If this is not feasible, the next to rely upon should be the county, and lastly the state.

SUFFRAGE ARMY READY FOR BIG DRIVE TODAY

Washington, Dec. 5.—The front line of the army of woman suffrage formed here today for the "big push" on congress to force through the Susan B. Anthony amendment at this short session.

The initial move of the campaign depends largely upon whether the attitude of President Wilson, which leads toward state instead of federal action has at all changed. Some suffrage workers believe it has, that it may be passed on promptly to the states for ratification.

The following official statement was made today by the Union through the United Press: "The feeling is general that a demand for a federal amendment should be pressed much more insistently than heretofore in view of the previous delay of congress in dealing with the measure."

The case for national suffrage has been unanimously presented. The movement has been endorsed by women voters at the polls and there is only one answer the administration can give, namely the passage of a federal amendment at this session. The women are not in a mood to brook delay.

We are confident the attitude of the administration will be favorable, because the democratic party, to maintain itself, must look to the west, where the woman voter is their support must aid woman suffrage. Miss Anne Martin of Nevada, national chairman of the woman's party, is in charge of the campaign.

SAFETY FIRST MEET FOR FIRE PRECAUTION

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 5.—Fire prevention will be one of the most important subjects discussed at the second annual convention of the Safety First Federation, which begins here today. Many devices for the safety of life, limb and property will be illustrated and demonstrated.

With statistics showing a national fire loss of $50,000,000 per year, the Safety First Federation, two years ago, undertook a country-wide campaign of education in an effort to cut down this tremendous loss, which was declared to have been entirely due to carelessness, and to protect life. On invitation of the federation, in 1915, the governors of thirty states issued proclamations setting aside Oct. 9 as Fire Prevention day. This year the movement received added impetus owing to a proclamation by President Wilson, making Oct. 9 a National Fire Prevention day, which was augmented by proclamations by the governors of many states. More than 500 cities, representing every state in the union, took part in the observance of the day. Reports of loss cut down and actual savings made possible came to the federation from all cities.

Mouth-Breathing Danger Signal. Of a child that habitually kept its mouth open people used to say that it had "a foolish look." They let it go at that. Nowadays understanding persons are quick to recognize the fact that the child needs medical and perhaps surgical treatment. The nasal passages, through which it should breathe, are obstructed, perhaps by adenoids.—Philadelphia Record.

BULGARIAN CZAR IS MOVIE ACTOR

Amsterdam, Dec. 5.—Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria is a movie actor. A long and short running today in Hamburg movie theatres, shows the work of a branch of the reds.

The drama is written around Bogdan Stoinoff, a Bulgarian peasant of Macedonia, falsely accused of murdering Stojanov, his Rumanian neighbor. The drama, full of thrilling scenes, shows the escape to America, where he becomes manager of a nail-factory.

When the "world war" breaks out, Stoinoff refuses to continue in the nail-factory business and embarks on a Swedish steamer for Germany. The steamer is captured by an Italian warship, but the hero escapes overboard. He is rescued by a German submarine and taken home. He throws himself at the feet of the real Czar Ferdinand, is pardoned, takes his place in the army and performs many feats of valor.

The Czar plays his part remarkably well. He is seen walking in the park at Sofia when Stoinoff throws him when at his feet. Here the royal actor registers good surprise and talks to his subject sympathetically as if desirous of every detail of the Czar's life. He is next seen pinning a medal on the hero's breast and giving the royal salute.

Unlike most movie thrillers, the picture was not made in California, Arizona or on the hills of the Hudson. But it shows a real boat, aeroplanes and warships, soldiers and battles, and a real—not reel—king.

SAYS GERMANY HAS ONLY 45,000 MEN NOW LEFT IN STRATEGICAL RESERVE

In the Field, France, Dec. 5.—Following the sacrifice of over 500,000 men at Verdun and the terrible losses sustained on the Somme, Germany is reduced today to such a number of men that she has only three divisions, or about 45,000 men, left for her strategical reserve. Austria is in precisely the same condition, the "croops" being held in reserve by her exceeding three divisions.

This information, with supporting evidence, was placed at my disposal today to refute the claims made by Germany and Austria that they are holding in reserve a large strategical army which will be flung at a given moment on the particular point where they wish to engage a decisive battle.

That this condition was brought about largely through Germany's obstinacy in keeping up the six months attack at Verdun was confirmed to me by the same source. The intelligence department of the French army has been able definitely to ascertain this.

GERARD TO GERMANY; TAKES VIEWS OF U. S.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Dec. 5.—Ambassador James W. Gerard today sailed on the steamer Frederick VII. to resume his duties at Berlin, leaving President Wilson determined to pursue the same course as in the past toward Germany.

The ambassador carried with him a clear summary of this government's attitude on all questions now pending between Germany and the United States, gained in conferences with the president in the first talks he has had with the president since the war began.

While here the ambassador assured those with whom he talked that the danger of certain radical elements in the empire overthrowing the influence of the German government was trifling.

Before sailing Gerard expressed the belief that many of the belligerent countries—Germany at least—will do all of their buying in their own countries.

"If our peace and prosperity is to continue," he told a group of New York business men, "we must give permission for business to combine for foreign trade."

The president embodies this same idea in his message to congress today.
